MSD: Parent and Guardian Classroom Observation Coordination

Parents and legal guardians may visit classes to observe their own student as allowed by law and District policy. To protect instructional time and the privacy rights of other students, classroom observations should be arranged in advance through the principal or designee, and the school may require administrator accompaniment or other reasonable safeguards.

A classroom observation may be limited, rescheduled, or otherwise reasonably managed when the frequency, timing, location, or manner of the observation would substantially interfere with instruction, student privacy, supervision, safety, or the efficient operation of the school.
